Biao v. Denmark

24.05.2016

The case concerned the complaint by a naturalised Danish citizen of Togolese origin, Ousmane Biao, and his Ghanaian wife that they could not settle in Denmark. Notably, the Danish authorities refused to grant them family reunion as the couple did not comply with the requirement under the relevant domestic law (the Aliens Act) that they must not have stronger ties with another country, Ghana in their case, than with Denmark (known as the "attachment requirement"). The applicants also complained that an amendment to the Aliens Act in December 2003 – lifting the attachment requirement for those who held Danish citizenship for at least 28 years – resulted in a difference in treatment between those born Danish nationals and those, like Mr Biao, who had acquired Danish citizenship later in life.

Violation of Article 14 \(prohibition of discrimination\) read in conjunction with Article 8 \(right to respect for private and family life\)

The Court further held that there was no need to examine the application separately under Article 8 of the Convention taken alone.

Schwabach and Others v. Denmark \(nos. 35553/12, 36678/12, and 36711/12\)

In this case, the applicants, football supporters who were detained by the Danish police prior to a match in order to prevent hooligan violence, complain that their preventive police custody had been unlawful.

The applicants complain that their detention was unlawful as it had exceeded the time-limit prescribed by domestic law, and notably that it had not been justified under Article 5 §§ 1 b) or c) (right to liberty and security) of the European Convention.

These applications were communicated to the Danish Government, with a question from the Court, on 7 January 2014.
